James Wright.

James Wright, born in South Carolina, May 28, 1753; died June 11, 1812, son of John and Rachel (Wells) Wright. John was the son of James Wright who was born, probably, in Pennsylvania in 1677; married Mary, whose maiden name is not now known in 1707. She was born in 1681. The writer knows nothing of their children except, John above mentioned, who married Rachel Wells, in South Carolina.

John and Rachel Wright were members of Friends. They were in Bush River meeting when organized in 1772, and were living in South Carolina as early as 1745 when Charity, their oldest child was born. They moved to North Carolina during the Revolution, and were on the Holston river in Tennessee in 1780.

James Wright married Sarah Haworth, daughter of James, son of George Haworth the Immigrant, in South Carolina. When the great tidal wave of Quaker emigration, which started from Pennsylvania during the early part of the year 1770, at last reached Bush River in South Carolina, it turned again, dividing into two courses; one part went toward Wrightsville, Georgia, and the other turned toward Tennessee. The Haworths and Wrights joined the migration from Bush River toward Tennessee about the year 1780.
